The Late Hollins Affair at New Orleans—The Great Ram
Allack and Its Fuilure—Pusallaminity of Captain Pope,

Affair—Appearance of the Affair—Appearance of the Richmond—Details of the Affair—Appearance of the Ram and Fire Rafts, de.

You are already aware of the fact of the blockade at Pensacola, which has been maintained some months at the passes of the Mississippi river, Mobile and Texas-On our arriving at this station in April last we found Captain Adams, of the Sabine, in command. He however, was soon afterwards relieved by Captain Merwin, of the Mississippi, also since called home, not for his activity or energy while in command. Captain McKean, of the Niagara, is now chief officer of the squadron, and he has certainly exhibited more zeal and activity than his predecessors. Immediately after taking command he ordered the Richmond, Vincennes and Preble up the Mississippi river to the head of the passes. These vessels got off after serious difficulty and were towed to their destination, the Richmond and Viacennes having got aground. Their positions at the head of the passes were such that they could have destroyed any vessel that would attempt to run the gauntlet. Occasionally a rebel steam-tug, armed with ride guns, would come down the river take a survey and then blaze away at us. The Water Witch on these occasions would give chase, but the rebel vessels were always too fast for her. Finding that the rebel guns were superior to ours, heavier cannon was supplied to us from Pensacola. The affair in these waters, which caused so much commotion North and South, on account of the gasconade of the rebel Hollins, took place on the morning of the 12th of October About seven bells (half-past three A. M.) an alarm was given from the Preble that a very suspicious something was floating down the river towards the Richmond. In a few minutes the something struck a coal schooner, attached to the Richmond, parting them. The fleet beat to quarters, and the men were immediately at their posts.

As well as it was possible at the time it was discovered that the strange visiter was an iron-plated steamer, designed as a battering ram. It was evident that the great ram had missed its aim, for she glided away, discharging a rocket as she went. Immediately following the discharge of the rocket several large fire rafts, chained together and filled with combustibles, were sent down the river in the direction of the fleet. Signals were at this time made by the Richmond to slip cables, and the other vessels began the retreat, firing a few random shots as they stea away. This was the most cowardly part of the affair, as the Richmond alone could have easily held the passes, destroyed the fire rafts, and sunk the battering ram. But the Richmond was the first to cut, leaving behind her the schooner Frolic, a prize taken s few days before, so eager was she to make her escape. "the Pope run battle," after Captain Pope, of the Rich mond. In the hurry of flight the Richmond was run aground, the Vincennes getting into the same scrape im-mediately after. The Preble was saved from a like fate olness and gallantry of Lieutenant Davis, who piloted her safely over the bar. The r steamers gave chase and opened fire upon the bar, which was returned by ond, Vincennes and Water Witch. The Vincennes being in a bad position—stern on, and the rebel firing too hot for her—she was abandoned, the officers and crew distributing themselves among the other vessels. For tunately the Richmond grounded in such a manner as to bring her breadside guns to bear upon the rebels, and thus kept them from capturing or destroying the Vin Water Witch all the time ho cennes. The water witch an the time hovered about, harassing the enemy with her one twelve-peunder rifled howitzer. Had Captain Pope kept his position at the head of the pass, and fought his ship as well as he was forced to do when further re. his ship as well as he was forced to do when further re-treat was out of his power, this disgraceful affair would not have happened. A few hours later and the Richmond would have been in possession of a forty-two-pounder rifled cannon brought by the steamer McClellan from Pensacola. We all felt disgraced to be thus compelled to reoss battering ram and a few armed steam tugs. slighest damage to either side, when the rebels left and proceeded up the Southwest Pass. This latter move was in consequence of the appearance of McClellan on the scene. There must have been a bad tout kept on board the Richmond to have allowed the hattering ram to come so close before it was discovered. The rebel plan was well laid, but badly executed; nevertheless it was the coal barge that sank the Richmond.

The whole affair will no doubt receive the attention of a naval court of inquiry. The most effective part of the

DESCRIPTION OF THE RAM.

It appeared to us a low, short, chunky stern wheel steaming, black as night, with a low funnel rising from her misshapen form. There was a revolving piece of machinery protruding from her bow, which, I have no doubt, from the appearance of the injury to the Richmond, was the ramming portion of the vessel. The injury seemed as if it had been inflicted by a ster screw augur, or devil's claw, or something of volume of black smoke, that rendered the darknes around more dark. The commander of this buttering ram was a daring, determined fellow. We could plain! hear him give his orders, "Steady," "Port," board," &c. She subsequently disappeared in the dark The burning halks drifted ashore, when they paied their ineffectual fires and thus ended the rebel Hollin's great ram battering

WHAT THE REBELS SAY ABOUT THE RAM The New Orleans True Delta, in its account of the ex ploit of the Manageas, relates an act of courage perform by two seamen while shot and shell were falling thickly upon the ram:-

upon the ram.—

The Richmond now took the Vincennes in tow, and the Water Witch grappled the Preble, all the time keeping up a heavy fire on the ram, but without striking her exceptiones, and then knocking down the remaining chimnes once, and then knocking down the remaining chimnes over the vent of the other one. This choked up the out let for the smoke, and as they wore yet burning the tar sulphur and tallow, the acplayitating gas that areas from it rushed down and spread throughout the boat threatening to sufficient every one in a few minutes. Nothing was to be done except for some one to go ended and cut away the wrack, while the shires less than a quarter of a mile distant, were raining their bulls all around them.

Seizing an axe, Mr. Hardy realed up the companion way, nor could Lieutenant Warley, who had not discovered the accident, hold him back. Austin saw him go up, and knowing that he could not stand alone on the arched root, followed him up. There, on the unguarded top, Hardy cut away the fallen chimney and six guys with the axe, while Austin, breating his feet firmly spart, held him steady. All the while the balls and shots were whisting past and around them. The vent was opened and the sulpurous smoke realed out, just as these below were getting suffocated.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

The Skirmish Between the New York Fourteenth and Rebel Cavalry—What the British Minister Says Respecting the Capture of Slidell and Mason, &c. WASHINGTON, Nov. 20, 1861.

APPAIRS ALONG THE UNION LINES.

All quiet along the lines of the army to-night. THE RECENT SKIRMISH NEAR VALLS CHURCH. Mention was made in a previous despatch of a skirmish yesterday afternoon, two miles and a half southwest of have been ascertained. The charge upon our pickets near Brush's house, was made by three hundred or more rebel cavalry, and this occasioned the stampede. There was heavy firing on both sides, our men gallantly standing their ground; but were compelled to retreat to the reserve in consequence only of the superior force and cavalry advantage of the enemy, who, as it was yesterday stated, fell back on the advance of our reinforcements. The charge of the rebel cavalry was made on the pickets of Company H, Fourteenth Brooklyn regiment. The following are the names of the

HOW THE DIPLOMATIC CORPS ARE AFFECTED BY THE CAPTURE OF SLIDELL AND MASON. The seizure of my Lord Mason and Monsieur Sidell, on board of the British mail steamer Trent, has produced an anusual degree of fluttering among the whole diplomatic corps here to-day. Without waiting to ascertain how far the act of Capt. Wilkes is justified by the acknowledged and established principles of international law, some the Ministers from foreign parts have allowed themselves to be betrayed into expressions exhibiting infinitely more passion and prejudice than judgment and diplomatic intelligence. The representative of one Power has openly declared that if Mason and Slidell had been taken from a Spanish vessel he would have immediately demanded hi passports.

Lord Lyons is said to have assumed a menacing tone and to have declared that the prisoners must be given up. or ample reparation made for the offence offered to the dignity of the British crown. Nothing of this kind has been officially intimated, but in ordinary intercours these expressions of disapprobation and hostility have been unguardedly made.

The fact has long been apparent, that a large portion of the diplomatic corps is infected with the poison dissemi-nated by the last administration in Washington. Since the inauguration of the present administration it has been so continually occupied with the management of our domestic affairs, that there has been no opportunity to cradicate the false impressions thus produced. In the case of England, since the beginning of the rebellion there has been exhibited a very bitter disposition, almost smounting at times to insolence—a manifestation pecu, liar to that government in its intercourse with what it liar to that government in its intercourse with what it considers weak or distressed governments, and particu-larly republics. This approach to insolence has been on more than one occasion severely rebuked by Mr. Seward in his replies to Lord Lyons, and the castigations thus administered have not increased the fondness of the British Minister for our government, or softened his acerbity towards a nation that is too pround to submit to such assumption.

The diplomatic circle will, however, rave it The diplomatic circle will, however, rave in vain. The government is determined not to be moved from its conviction of right by all the menaces they can possibly utter. It has decided that the proceeding of Captain Wilkes shall be sustained, although he acted without special instructions, and that the right shall be maintained at all cost, even if it should involve the government in war with Great the occasion. We could never have been better prepared for a foreign war than now, by land and sea, nor would it ever find the masses of the people in better humor for

THE RETALIATORY MEASURES OF THE REBELS. The publication of the barbarous correspondence be tween J. P. Benjamin, styling himself Secretary of War of the Confederate States, and his jailors, has aroused a deep and fearful feeling of indignation. Numerous letters from prominent and influential citizens have already beer addressed to the Secretary of State urging retaliatory measures. A proposition is seriously talked of here to teach the savages of the rebel government that they can not with impunity perpetrate the barbarities they propose and have already commenced. There are in our government are bound to protect. The rebelowards Mason and Slidell, and Eastis and McFarland and Morehead and others, of hardly less note, and the would still less lik to arouse such a feeling of popula dignation throughout the loyal States as would induce the seizure and summary execution of every Souther ojourner at present in our Norther cities. If they wan to discard all humanity, and make this a war of savages they may get the worst of it; and their thieving Secre tary of War may yet find that he has aroused a feeling it the loyal States that will be hard to allay.

A strong effort is being made here by prominent Ken tuckians to procure an exchange of Morchead, of Kentucky, now confined at Fort Warren, for Charles Anderson, of Texas, a brother of Major Rob Anderson, who has been seized and imprisoned by the rebels for his adherence to the Union.

SANITARY CONDITION OF THE ABOVE From a careful investigation of the condition of the army during the past month, the Sanitary Commission have arrived at the following general facts:-That the sickness and mortality of the army in the West is great er, proportionately, than in the East; that the mortality so far much less than in the Mexican war, is much less than the average of European wars, and that it is not much greater than in civil life. It is expected, however, that on the approach of cold weather, unless very good arrangements are made for winter quarters both sickness and mortality will increase.

THE INQUIRY RESPECTING THE ESCAPE OF THE PRI-

The Naval Court Martial for the trial of Commander Poor, who permitted the privateer Sumter to escape were in session several hours to-day, and examined Lie-Adams, one of the officers of the steamer Richmond. It appears, from the evidence of the witness to day, and als from other evidence, that Commander Poor performed his duty in a proper manner. The material witnesses in that affair, however, have not yet been examined. It is alleged that the government has positive evidence to the ffect that the escape of the Sumter was entirely owing to the negligence of Commander Poor.

THE NUMERICAL STRENGTH OF THE ARMY.
